PREFACE

In the course of compiling this book, I have had the pleasure of meeting a number of family members (about 50) from across the country. Some out of curiosity came to the office in Portland. The author sought out others while traveling in Oregon and during trips to the East Coast. A number of visits were specifically to accept invitations of hospitality. Each occasion, whether for an hour or an overnight stay, was pleasurable and has resulted in new friendships. Over the years, I hope to have opportunities to meet many more of you. Every family member I have met is justly proud of his-her Brainard-Brainerd-Braynard family heritage.

Material for the 1990 Update to the Genealogy of the BRAINERD-BRAINARD Family in America, 1649-1908, has been collected and compiled over the past six years. This publication has been preceded by the Supplement to the Genealogy of the BRAINERD-BRAINARD Family in America, 1649-1908, published in January 1990, and by the 1988 reprint of The Genealogy of the BRAINERD-BRAINARD Family in America, 1649-1908, in three volumes, by Lucy Abigail Brainard.

The information contained in the 1990 Update has been provided by numerous family correspondents and gleaned from public records, news clippings, and historical publications researched in various locations across the United States. All material in the 1990 Update has been collected and compiled solely by the author from these sources. The information is not all-inclusive and in some instances may not be accurate. Any omissions or inaccuracies are unintentional. However, it may be that inaccurate data was inadvertently provided to the author. As the 1990 Update has been compiled over a six-year period, it is also inevitable that changes have occurred which are not reflected in the publication. Any corrections and additions should be forwarded to the author for inclusion in a future addendum.

Approximately 3,000 persons have been contacted through correspondence in attempts to obtain family information. All have been contacted twice, most have been contacted three times, and many as often as five or more times. Substantial family group information was provided by some, while others submitted only their own personal data. The receipt of all information, regardless of how great or small, is appreciated. About one-third of the letters sent went unanswered. This is in addition to letters returned marked "insufficient address," "forward order expired," or simply marked "unknown" or "deceased."

The author wishes to acknowledge two individuals who provided extraordinary assistance in preparation of the 1990 Update. Mrs. Rosalyn Mary Heery, of Dorothy Bays Secretarial Service, spent a number of months in front of a word-processing machine typing the handwritten drafts and indexes. Her organizational capability and superb typing skills have been much appreciated. Ms. Karen Ruth Courtenay (No. 619i, William[2] line) of Andover, MA. did a general proofreading of much of the typed manuscript. The author conveys his utmost thanks to these two valuable assistants.

The 1990 Update to the Genealogy of the BRAINERD-BRAINARD Family in America, 1649-1908, is dedicated to all those wonderful people who provided information for this undertaking. Without their help in gathering family data, there would be no book. I hope you enjoy it.

INTRODUCTION

Compilation of the 1990 Update was begun in earnest in 1986. Prior to that time, it had been an effort only to catalog Brainard-Brainerd family members in Oregon as a local history project. However, it quickly spread to other states in order to trace family lines. From that beginning, the effort has encompassed the lineage of all Brainard-Brainerd-Braynard family members who could be found.

The following statements from the Preface of the 1908 Genealogy apply equally to the 1990 Update:

> "Many of the correspondents gave such information as they could, while others consigned the requests to the wastebasket or waited a more convenient opportunity, which rarely ever came to them. If their records are not to be found in the book, the delinquents must bear the blame . . . It has been impossible to verify all records, though I have aimed to have them accurately transcribed. Records written at different times by the same individual and from members of the same family have been found to vary . . . To all who have in any way contributed to the success of my self-imposed task I wish to express my thanks, for without their aid much less would have been successfully accomplished."

General

The "Introduction" and "First Generation" chapters in the 1908 Genealogy, which are reprinted in the Supplement, describe our earliest known ancestral heritage. These chapters are not repeated in the 1990 Update.

To obtain the lineage between the First Generation and the earliest following generation listed in the 1990 Update will require access to a copy of the 1908 Genealogy. The 1990 Update references, but does not duplicate or retrace persons and information compiled by Lucy Abigail Brainard (No. 53iii, Daniel[2] line) in the 1908 Genealogy. The Supplement in numerous cases, provides additional family information missing from the 1908 Genealogy which helps to bridge the gap between a last family entry in the 1908 Genealogy and the 1990 Update.

It is estimated that approximately 15,000 Brainard-Brainerd-Braynard family members, including females but not descendants of females, have been born since the compilation of the 1908 Genealogy. It is further estimated that about 8,000 of these family members are alive today and are living in approximately 3,000 households.

In addition to all those who received the family name by birthright, many have received the name through adoption, marriage, or other reason. Two families have stated that their ancestors obtained the family name at the time of their immigration into the United States. In another case the name was taken as a stage name. It was thereafter used by the son of the actress as his official family name. In numerous cases, children have adopted their mother's birth name. For some, the mother's family name has been given to the child if the parents did not marry.

Family members have been located in all fifty states, in some provinces of Canada, and in England, Germany and Switzerland. A few others are located in Australia, Sri Lanka and Sierra Leone.

California has the largest number of family members. Other states with large numbers of family members are Ohio, Connecticut, New York, Florida, Illinois, Michigan and Massachusetts, generally in that order. Many of those in England and Germany are there on a temporary basis with the U.S. armed forces. One family living in London is Tamil Indian. They and their cousins in Australia and Sri Lanka originated in southern India. The family in Sierra Leone is African.

In early 1987, the author prepared a detailed proposal for a comprehensive update of the family genealogy. This update was expected to take five years to accomplish and was to be comprehensively researched. Genealogical researchers were to be retained in each state to provide a thorough search of vital statistics, census records, local histories, biographies and other information relating to Brainard-Brainerd-Braynard family members. Research was also to be accomplished in the military and pension records at the National Archives, records at the NSDAR Library, and records at the Salt Lake LDS Genealogical Library.

A number of historical and genealogical societies and family groups were approached for assistance in the substantial cost to finance this effort. Sadly, no family group or organization was in a financial position, or had a funding program available to help finance such an undertaking.

After due consideration, the author decided to proceed with compilation of the Supplement. In the process, all family information received was cataloged for a future update. A very large amount of material for an update was accumulated. Based on sales of the Supplement and requests for a published update, the author proceeded to complete and publish the 1990 Update.

The purpose of this publication is simply to bring up to date as much as possible the complete Brainard-Brainerd-Braynard family genealogy. The genealogy was first compiled and set down in writing presumably by a Rev. Elijah Brainerd. This so-called "Brainerd Manuscript" is kept in the archives of the New England Historic Genealogical Society in Boston, Mass. It is written on 6-inch by 3-inch sheets of paper and contains information concerning Daniel[1] and his children. The cover is titled "A Genealogical Synopsis of the Brainerds." The manuscript is dated 20 January 1786.

In the "Brainerd Family Genealogy" loose files in the library of the Connecticut Historical Society, Hartford, Conn. is a four-page letter from Elijah Brainerd to Rev. David Dudley Field dated Dec. 6, 1813 which lists an additional two generations of some family members.

A somewhat complete family genealogy was compiled by Rev. D.D. Field. It is titled The Genealogy of the BRAINERD FAMILY in the United States, published in New York by John F. Trow, Printer in 1857.

A very comprehensive family genealogy was researched and compiled between 1880 and 1907 by Lucy Abigail Brainard (No. 53iii, Daniel[2] line). It is The Genealogy of the BRAINERD-BRAINARD Family in America, 1649-1908 in three volumes, published in Hartford by the Hartford Press of the Case, Lockwood & Brainard Company, in 1908.

In the preparation of any genealogy, it is inevitable that a number of individuals and families will not be found. In addition, a great many who are found may choose not to respond to inquiries. There is no fail-safe method for ensuring the inclusion of these persons and families in the genealogy.

A large number of people believed to be descended from families included in the 1908 Genealogy have chosen not to respond. Their lines therefore could not be included in the 1990 Update. Conversely, a number of families not previously found, whose lines so far cannot be connected to the main stem of the family tree, have responded, and their data has been included in the Miscellaneous Records section.

Numbering System

The numbering system devised for the 1990 Update follows on the system in the 1908 Genealogy. The beginning number for each line in the 1990 Update is the next hundred number following the last number in the same line in the 1908 Genealogy. This eliminates any potential confusion with overlapping numbers in the same line. Also, the 1990 Update is organized in the same generational progression as the 1908 Genealogy for each family group. Following is the progression for each line.

Line	1908 Genealogy	1990 Update
Daniel[2]	2 - 250	301 - 468
James[2]	2 - 1248	1301 - 2033
Joshua[2]	2 - 193	201 - 300
William[2]	2 - 444	501 - 745
Caleb[2]	2 - 417	501 - 868
Elijah[2]	2 - 513	601 - 992
Hezekiah[2]	2 - 55	101 - 254

Compilation Format

The 1990 Update uses the same format as that in the 1908 Genealogy. Each individual in the earliest listing of a family group carried forward from the 1908 Genealogy is listed with birth date and place, marriage information, spousal data, death information as relevant, and biographical data as available. Each child is first listed under the parent's entry with full name, birth date and birth place as available. If the child does not have the Brainard-Brainerd-Braynard surname by birth or adoption, the line ends with that listing. In numerous cases, however, correspondents provided additional data. This has been included as appropriate under these ending lines. If a Brainard-Brainerd-Braynard child did not marry, the listing also ends under the parent's entry. If a Brainard-Brainerd-Braynard child married or had children, he or she is carried forward with his or her own number to the next generation.

The reason for variances in the ages and dates listed for persons in the same generation is that individuals down through the generations marry and have children at different ages. Even within one family in one generation, there can be a full generational gap with siblings born as much as twenty years or more apart.

Separate indexes are included for the family line of each son of Daniel[1]. This is to avoid an overly long index with numerous page references to one name. For those who do not know their lineage, the time needed to examine each index is not significant.

Repository for Research Material

All research material collected by the author will be deposited in the library archives of the Connecticut Historical Society in Hartford, Conn. Because the Brainard-Brainerd-Braynard family in America originated in Connecticut, and because the Society already maintains a number of ancestral files regarding the family, the Society's archives are the logical repository for these files. This material includes correspondence, genealogical forms, individual family group histories, news clippings and miscellaneous data filed in each family group folder. In some cases, there is family information which goes beyond the published material in the Supplement and the 1990 Update. Also included are complete 1990 Census Soundex lists for all states except Iowa, Michigan, New Jersey and New York, 1880 Census Soundex lists for some states, and miscellaneous census material for various other years. There are miscellaneous birth, marriage and death lists for CA., CT., ME., MA., NH., OR. and VT., lists from various Who's Who publications and photocopied pages from numerous town and county histories. Some additional family group genealogies which are a number of generations removed from Brainard-Brainerd-Braynard are included in a miscellaneous file along with articles about individuals who could not be connected to the main stem of the family. All files related to publication of the Supplement and the 1990 Update, as well as the author's name and address card index and mailing lists obtained from other sources, are also included in the archival material. Others who have Brainard-Brainerd-Braynard historical papers and items are encouraged to contribute such material to the Connecticut Historical Society archives.

Family Association and Reunion

A number of correspondents have suggested that a family association be formed and a reunion organized and held at Haddam, Connecticut, the home of Daniel[1] Brainerd and his wife Hannah Spencer. The family association suggestion has taken root. Merritt Francis Brainard (No. 1970, James[2] line) and Alan Lee Brainard (No. 746, Elijah[2] line) have graciously accepted the task of the initial organization of the BRAINARD-BRAINERD-BRAYNARD Family Association. To date this has involved gathering ideas and bylaws from established family associations, preparing a recommended organizational format, compiling a mailing list on computer disk, finding an editor, and organizing a newsletter. A surprisingly large number of contributions have been received from a number of persons who purchased the Supplement. It is anticipated that the first newsletter will have been sent out in mid-to-late 1990 prior to publication of the 1990 Update.

Positive responses regarding a reunion in 1990 or 1991 were not sufficient to warrant the substantial work and cost necessary to organize and hold the event. Future newsletters will describe possibilities for a reunion and it is hoped these will generate a sufficient level of interest. The author has been notified of smaller family group reunions which have recently taken place or are scheduled in different locations across the country. The newsletter can be used to advertise future regional family group gatherings.

Family History in England

Hubert Ellis Brainard, Jr. (No. 1720, James line) of Oak Harbor, WA. has applied for membership in the Essex Society for Family History, Essex County, England. The objectives of the Society are "a) to promote and encourage the public study of British family history, genealogy and heraldry with particular reference to Essex, and b) to promote the preservation and accessibility of archival material." A quarterly magazine, "The Essex Family Historian," is sent free to all members. It contains news, articles, material of family history interest, and other information to assist members in their research. Requests for help are printed in the magazine. Submission of relevant articles is welcomed.

Should sufficient funds be generated in the future through the membership of the fledgling BRAINARD-BRAINERD-BRAYNARD Family Association, it may be appropriate for the Association to seek research assistance from the Essex Society for Family History concerning our English ancestral heritage. It must be pointed out, however, that substantial English research has been undertaken in the past in an attempt to ascertain the ancestors of Daniel[1] Brainerd. This research is documented in "The Introduction" of the 1908 Genealogy.

The following excerpt from a November 1963 letter written by Newton Case Brainard (No. 118vii, Daniel[2] line) to Joseph Kimmel Brainard (No. 20, Leonard - lineage unknown) advises of additional research.

> "In regard to the possibility of getting information regarding Daniel Brainerd's family in England, I would say that a good many years ago Mr. Homer Brainard (No. 204i, Caleb line) had an English genealogist make an exhaustive search. The results were not satisfactory and did not reveal any real information."

In earlier times in England our family surname was almost certainly not spelled Brainard, Brainerd, or Braynard, but was instead probably spelled something like Brainwood, Brentwood, or Burntwood and pronounced somewhat they way we spell it today.

The following news article from the Columbus Dispatch dated 2 December 1964, sent by Joseph Kimmel Brainard (No. 20, Leonard - lineage unknown), shows us that our name is not at all unusual in this respect.

British Pronunciations Baffling
By Every Rule of Orthography

LONDON (UPI) - Every now and then an American asks for "Lye-sester Square" to the immoderate laughter of the natives who have secretly agreed to pronounce it "Lester" regardless of its spelling.

By every rule of orthography Leicester Square ought to be "Lyesester" but the British take the somewhat arrogant view that it's their language and they can do with it as they wish, let logic fall where it may.

The truth of the matter is, of course, that if the Latin, Greek, Hebrew, German and other foreign words were taken out of English the British would be reduced to Anglo-Saxon grunts and sign language.

But until that happy day they will continue to call the city of Cirencester "Sissister" and be coldly disagreeable to anyone who mildly inquires why it isn't "Siren-sester."

Now writer Sid Colin comes forward with a suggestion that will shake many stately homes and crumbling castles to their ancient foundations.

For centuries one of the minor snobberies of this breed has been to mispronounce the family name.

The rule seems to be: The older the name the less it should be pronounced the way it is spelled.

And Colin thinks it is time that place names and family names were either properly pronounced or foreigners given a glossary at ports and airports.

"How else," he asked, "will they know that Cholmondeley is spoken Chumley? And Featherstonehaugh is often Fanshawe? And Bourchier is Bowcher, and Beaucamp is Beecham?"

How indeed?

Colin does not advocate anything as drastic as legislation, although he feels that any bar to making English the dominant international language ought to be removed.

He points out that such eminent reference works as Debrett's Guide to the Peerage have already had to put the family pronunciation of a name in brackets after the family listing.

Debrett's and others of its ilk show that the Ayscough family call themselves Askew. The Abergavenny family pronounce it Abergenny, while Lord Beaulieu claims his name is Bewley.

The Bellinghams say it Bellinjum.

The Belvoirs call themselves Beaver. The Cleaverhouses say it Clavers.

The famous Leveson-Gower family call themselves Looson-Gore. The Marjoribanks are the Marshbanks.

The Wriothesley family somehow manages to get Rexly out of their name.

Colin thinks the reform movement ought to start inside Britain.

"You Americans cannot throw the first stone," he said. "After all, you pronounce Sault St. Marie as Soo St. Marie, and how about Arkansaw for Arkansas?"

Cost to Prepare the 1990 Update

The cost in time and money required to prepare a comprehensive genealogical update can be mind-boggling, especially if there are many family groups and numerous individuals within each group. Researching, compiling, and publishing the Supplement and the 1990 Update has taken more than half the author's time over a six-year period from 1985 through 1990. For this time commitment, no wages have been paid and no contributions have been sought or received. Using a modest hourly fee of $10 (the minimum normally charged by most genealogical researchers) multiplied by the roughly 6,000 to 7,000 hours of times fully committed to the project, one comes up with a total of $60,000 to $70,000. If this minimum fee were charged against the project, the cost of the books would be prohibitive.

Many of the "hard costs" like those for mailing, typing, printing, binding, etc. can, however, appropriately be charged to the sales cost of the books. These hard costs have all been advanced to the project by the author. Additionally, $350 in unsolicited contributions for mailing costs have been received. The largest contribution, for $200, was received from Shirley Barbara (Brainard) Phillips (No. 157, Hezekiah[2] line). To each of the contributors, the author extends his thanks.

The total hard costs for both the Supplement and the 1990 Update (excluding the publication costs for the Supplement, which were covered by sales receipts) add up to roughly $64,000. This is after liberal discounts for research trips and the use of office telephone, equipment, and materials.

A Genealogist's Reward

The following paragraphs are excerpted from the Preface of the 1908 Genealogy. The author has borrowed the caption "A Genealogist's Reward" from the original text by Lucy Abigail Brainard.

> "The compiling of this book and the arrangement of the material sent me has required many years of patient labor and research and has necessarily been somewhat expensive. Many members of the family would deem it a privilege to bear a portion of the expense in printing and binding so that the whole of my time for many years past will not have been given wholly without compensation. Those who can and will aid me in bearing the expense of putting the large work through the press, either by subscribing for a number of copies or by contributing to the fund for printing, are earnestly and cordially invited to do so . . .
> Perhaps those who have not worked at preparing a genealogy infer that the facts marshal themselves in order ready for printing. Such is not the case. The whole genealogy has been twice written by hand, first, to arrange the records as sent; second, to copy and arrange them for reference, which copy by constant use became so worn that the third copying was necessary. The third copy was done on the typewriter by a stenographer hired for the purpose.
> In obtaining records I have had often to write six letters to find out where I could obtain a certain record of a family, and then as many more to get the record well filled out. Four bureau drawers packed full of letters testify to the faithfulness with which I have worked. I have sat at my table weeks at a time from eight o'clock in the morning till six o'clock at night working constantly at the genealogy. If there are any doubting Thomases among those who read this statement, let them work for a year in collecting genealogical facts and they will be convinced of its truth and decide they had rather buy a genealogy than to prepare one."

The following letters have been provided by Billie Ruth (Olds) Niemann:

Probably Southfield, 1843

Respected parents,

I now take my pen in hand to address you for the first big letter. I had good luck in getting our goods from Detroit as they was brought out free of expense, and there was only two dishes broken. I came on to my place as soon as we got here and hired a team for two and six pence per day and have sowed eight acres of wheat. It looks well. I think by industry and good economy that we can equal our superiors. It seems like home here and everything goes along pleasantly. Lucy is contented and proves to be a good companion.

Allen has been here and has gone to Grand Blane. I received a line from him stating that he had hired out for a month then as he had been offered 12 a month for teaching school he thought of taking it.

Produce is plenty and cheap therefore there is no danger of starving. I shall not get a team until (hole in the paper)

You have my sincere affection. My respect to all.

O.N. Brainerd

Southfield, Oct. 15, 1843

Respected Parents:

I now sit down once more to inscribe a few lines to you all to inform you of our health and circumstances at present and to inform you of how we got through with our journey and how we all enjoy ourselves here in the woods. So I will begin with the first of our journey.

After we left you I got started to go up and bid you goodbye, but I found I could not and you seemed to be in such a hurry that I went back into the cabin sat down and ate a hearty dinner of boiled beef and cabbage. Soon after dinner Morse called on me to bid me goodbye. We did not start from Rochester until toward night, we traveled on our journey. We had but two ladies in our boat and a very pleasant company we had too. Our captain was a very agreeable young man and the whole company seemed to enjoy themselves well. On Tuesday night we entered Lockport about 10 o'clock. We went up on deck to see the boat enter the Locks. We stood on the forward part of the boat til we got through two Locks, we then jumped of off and walked up to the upper one and got on again about six miles from there. We got stopped by another boat running aground, we with about 50 other boats lay there til about 8 o'clock. We arrived at Buffalo about 7 Wednesday afternoon. We got aboard The Buffalo soon after and started out of there about 9 at night. We stopped at Erie and broke one of the wheels and laid up nearly 23 hours to get it mended. The lake was quite still until Friday night and then we took a hard one. We were almost all sick about 3 hours. Orrin wasn't sick but I felt pretty qualmish for a short time. The Captain came along about that time and told us we had not paid our fare for he charges three shillings for his emetic.

We stopped at Detroit about 3 Sat. morning. We got off the boat by daylight, went to a hotel took breakfast and went out and picked out my stove. And by _____by, I have got one of the neatest stoves with all the fixins, shovel, tongs, teapot, pipe and everything, cost $17.93. We started for home 11-1/2, rode on the top of the Beddow's load. We arrived at uncle Green's that night at about 8, fatigued and with a good appetite, glad to find a place to rest ourselves.

Tuesday we went to keeping house. I have got everything as comfortable as you could ask for, enough to do and a good disposition to do it, for I do not want to go anywhere until my work is done. I am contented and love my home an do not think I should enjoy myself as well anywhere else, as I do here. Orrin is kind to me and seems to try to do everything to render me happy. I would not exchange my log house for the best house in Rush Village provided I had always got to live there. Our house is so large that I can have a large bedroom, a clothespress and a good sized kitchen and pantry. The _____ is large and high. We shall live as warm and comfortable here as you are in the frame house. We got a little cow two years old. She gives two quarts of milk to the milking. I think from what butter that I have made from her that I shall make all that we shall want this winter.

I have been spinning some wool since I came here for one of our neighbors, and am going to have some flax to work up in the spring. But it is no more profit here to spin than it is there, for clothes are almost as cheap here as there. I am not going to finish my carpet until next summer.

I wish you would send Dolphus* out here to stay a day or two with me for sometimes I do not have any other company than the maltese? I wish I could see the little fellow tonight how I would give him a spanking. Allen arrived here on Friday afternoon. After leaving home he had a pleasant journey and he stays until the next Tuesday. He says it seems very different since he left home, with no father's horses or buggy to use or to call on for spending money, or mother's cupboard to go to. I think if you let him stay until spring without saying much to him he will come home pretty well tamed, as he says it will be a good lesson for him. He writes that he shall not go to Nathan's until next month. The people are all well at Grand Blane. I think it will be very doubtful whether we go out there, or to Livingston either this winter. That is if Orrin goes into a school, which I suppose he will do, but he will board at home.

Mother my straw beds are almost wide enough for two bedsteads, and plenty long enough too. The first meal we ate in our house was on that big box, with a tablecloth spread over it and we stood and ate around it. Give my love to all enquiring friends and accept the same for yourself.

Yours truly,

Lucy P. Brainerd.

'Dolphus is the little halfbrother.

Sister Rachel, how do you get along these times? Do you work as hard as ever and scold as little? I want you to come out here and stay one day with me this week for I am going to bake and I want some light bread. I just looked into my kitchen with the white ash floor and see if it does not look clean for I had a present of a patent mop handle. I have got some stove blacking and I think my stove looks as black as mother's. When our folks write again you must put in a few words too. Now don't you forget.

Your sister.

Sister Phylinda, I have to acknolege the receipt of your valuable paper of patent thorn pins, for I have no doubt you thought that they would be of infinite service to me in this country where wood is so scarce, but as good luck will have it there is a plenty of thorn trees here and they have excellent points too. I have no doubt you will be here before long to help me pick some. I will send you some snail shells in return for your kindness, and have no doubt they will be of as much use to you as my pins were to me.

Brother George, I have no doubt you think we have plenty of wild game here but you would find out your mistake if you was here for all the wild game I have seen since I entered the state, was a flock of wild geese flying over Franklin. You must come out here and gather your stock of Swamp-oak acorns for the winter, and be a good boy, and bring in your night wood this winter, and take good care of Dolphus, and kiss him for me.

Kansas City, Jan 20, 1898

Dear Grandchild, (Stuart Brainerd, No. 1419, James[2] line)

I received yours about Christmas enclosing two dollars which I thank you very much for. As it has been very close times since

I have been here, I have had to use every economy to keep along.

But I have not been idle. I have found something to do most of the time which was a benefit to others if not to me. Last year I got up a new plan of making egg case fillings so that a hand could put together 70 cases a day while by the old method only 20 by the old way. I tried to get pay for it but could not. The parties at last settled by allowing me 2 1/2 per cent on sales made. There was about 60,000 sets sold last season for about $2400.00. Then the last fall I was at the cold storage warehouse here where they store eggs by the car load and in taking them out after being put in through the summer they found that the excelsior put in bottom of case had molded and spoiled the eggs (Morris Butts & Co. of St. Louis was here owners) and asked me to try and get up something to do away with that. I studied out and got up some fluted rollers to flute the flatts that is put between the layers of the eggs and it has proved a success having to use only one at top and bottom of eggs done away with all litter of straw or excelsior. One party made a shipment of eggs to Connecticut this fall and reported eggs are all in good shape not one broken. I had no funds to pay for a patent but the box company has entered into writing to allow me five per cent on large lots and eight per cent on small lots sold. They paid all expenses to machine shop getting up rollers. I am in hopes to get these on the market this season but everything goes slow these times, but the egg cases have just begun to move and I am in hopes to soon be paying expenses.

There is a large manufacturing for egg case fillings going up at Coffeyville, Kansas the largest in the world capable of turning out one carload of fillings per day which is going to shut down all small factories if possible but the president of the co. has been here to see me and proposes to go in with me here and furnish this part of the country. I brought him to this as that was about using my improvements and patent on last egg case. I have had several letters from them they expect to get started in the next 60 days, so you see Stuart I am the same old Granpa never idle but trying to be a benefit to some one.

I hope you and Earnest will make your mark one of these days. These times there is a wide opening for young people--much easier than when I was a boy. I am now over 76 years old but still feel like keeping up with the times.

I sent the copy of genealogy to Patten on in his letter about New Years. He wrote me that he got it. I will send you another or you can take a copy of it there if he wants to keep it.

With the oil correspondence and this other business I am kept pretty busy just now. My kidneys trouble me very much yet but is better than a month ago. The medicine Paten sent me helped me very much.

I suppose Pearl and Jessie have got to be large girls by this time. I would like to get a letter from them. Ma sends her love to you all would be glad to get a letter from you.

Your Grand Father
O. N. Brainerd

Nancy (Heard) Brainerd's tombstone makes no mention of the murder, but states that the marker was erected by three of her sons, Theodore, Charles, and Hiram. Three months before the murder, on 10 Feb. 1853, Nancy (Heard) Brainerd and her sons Theodore, William, Charles, Franklin, and Hiram legally "protested" Horace's keeping of a farm and buildings in Wickham leased to him by Nancy when he wasn't paying the rent, but it wasn't Horace who killed his mother, but William. Horace's reply to the protest was "I will make a surrender of the farm as received whenever and as soon as I am properly discharged from the rent -- the Barn was blown down & lost & my Mother took away the house and if there is any difficulty about the rent I am willing to submit it to impartial Men to decide."

The following explanation and poem was written by Dwight T. Brainard on 4 March 1975:

"An inspiration of thought from my brother Joseph whom the Lord did taketh away"

"THE PROMISE"

Weep not for me, O brother dear;
For I shall ascend, beyond this sphere:
Where the darkness, of death, shall be overcome;
In a land of beauty, beyond our sun:
For in that land, is perpetual light;
Where never there is, any earthly strife:
For the creator of all, whom made Heaven, and Earth;
Placed in the Heavens, a land of new birth:
For "Faith" in "His Word" and "Love of God"
Was given to us, from He whom we laud:
And we shall find, that peaceful rest:
Away from corruption, of the flesh:
So do not weep, any more, for me;
For the same, shall be yours, in victory:
For the Lord, blessed us all, when He gave of "His Life"
An eternal fountain, in that land, of pure "Light"
And when we meet, at His "Heavenly Gate"
The promise, "Jesus" made "He Shall Never Forsake"

"Amen"

Following are two poems by William T. Brainard:

My Sister
(Dedicated to his sister Blanche)

She worked the fields and garden
In the early morning sun
On a farm in East Ohio
Her work was never done
She stopped to smell the rose
And she loved the fields so green
She was just a farmers wife
But to us she was a queen
When the winter winds came blowing
And the day was at a close
Out of five and ten cent paper
She would make a paper rose
What is real or artificial
It is hard for one to say
Are we really flesh and blood
Or just a piece of clay
She lost her link with beauty
And life as it goes
And I shall always remember her
When I seen a paper rose.

Almost Heaven

There's a land that's almost heaven and if you ever want to go Just cross the big Ohio where the muddy waters flow

Travel on down the highway through the hill's so lush and green
you're in the State of West Virginia where the air is fresh and clean

Let me cross the big Ohio
where the muddy waters flow
Let me taste a breath of heaven
where the honeysuckles grow
I'll trade my place in heaven
In that great mansion up above
Just to walk down a country road
Through the hill's that I love

Alaska is the biggest State
tho Texas will brag and shout
But I say West Virginia is bigger than both if they flatten all the hill's out and if you don't believe me I'll tell you where to go Just cross the big Ohio where the muddy waters flow

When the roll is called up yonder and it comes my time to go
Let me cross the big Ohio
Where the muddy waters flow
Take me back to Lewis County to the land where I was born
Let me taste a breath of heaven
on a early summer morn

The following poem was written by Emma Alice Brainerd:

TWILIGHT

As shadows lengthen,
I sit alone on the cabin steps
And watch Nature turn down her lights.
Distant mountain ranges Blend their contours and Become one long silhouette.
An airplane, following the sun westward,
Leaves a pink signature
On the waning blue of the sky
As a lingering farewell to the day.
No bird sings an obligato
To the brook's soft murmur.
Wildlife mothers gather their offspring
Into secluded shelters
As a distant coyote wails
His greeting to the night.
An Alpine glow tinges trees with gold.
The day's cares surrender to the beauty,
And the present becomes the past.

In reverie I feel the warmth
Of yesterday's friendships,
The joy of conversations long past,
The adventure of travel
In exotic places,
The bittersweet memory of parting,
And the loneliness at twilight
When the whip-poor-will Chanted in the woods.

A cool breeze returns me to reality.
Darkness, like a benediction,
Enfolds the cabin.

Charlotte's mother died when she was eleven. The entire family was ill with influenza. Her older sister died one night, and her mother the following night. At the time, her mother was nursing Robert, the baby. Her father was a hard man and would not hire someone to take over household chores. These tasks fell to Charlotte. In a letter, she writes ... "I remember the first time I mopped the kitchen floor - it was wooden and my mother always kept it white. A neighbor lady scolded me 'your father finds out you can do it, he will make you!' How true! He was a cripple - had to have a leg amputated soon after their marriage. He did exterior and interior painting and papering, and used a cart and horse to get around. One morning he was going to a job and something scared the horse. It upset the cart with my father in it. He received a broken leg and laid with the cart until someone came along in mid-afternoon. The flies had gotten into his bloody leg, and it had to be amputated. My parents' first baby, a girl, was sick with a fever and died the same day father's leg was taken off.

We had a restaurant. My mother cooked for it. She was up at daylight making pies, bread, cakes, rice pudding. She worked too hard. She was 31 when she died - had nine babies! Doctor said that's why she died - just plain worn out from having babies. We lived in back of the restaurant. She washed on the board and ironed with old hand irons heated on the stove. She was a very clean person. I loved my mother, but never learned to love my father.

My brother Larry was slow at learning. He had scarlet fever which left him weak in many ways. I was about five years old. We were doing our lessons one night and mother was helping Larry, when my father took over. He sat Larry on the stairs, got a rubber fly swatter, and gave my brother a word to spell. Each time Larry missed a word, my father slapped him across the face with the swatter.

The girls at school were having a skating party one Saturday afternoon. That was my day to do the wash, but I decided I'd go skating and wash on Sunday. After breakfast, my father said 'get your wash water on to heat.' I said 'I'm going skating today and wash tomorrow, and Grandma Acker said you should hire the wash done!' With that, he hit me twice across the back with his cane and said 'your Grandma Acker doesn't run this house.' Well, I never crossed him again.

In 1931, I fell with a large pan of boiling water and scalded myself from neck to toes. I sent my daughter to get help. In a few minutes there were twelve ladies here with jars of sour milk. They covered me with sour milk. The doctor later said it was good first aid for a burn."

The following news article was carried in the San Francisco Chronicle, Friday, 20 Sep. 1968:

THE GATE BRIDGE'S FIRST BABY

A baby girl was born in a station wagon racing across the Golden Gate Bridge yesterday morning.

It was the first time such a thing had happened on the bridge -- and it caused an uproar at the toll plaza.

The parents are Terry and Audrey Brainard of 328 Ridgewood Drive, Mill Valley.

The seven-pound, ten-ounce child and her mother were in good condition last night at the University of California Hospital here.

Dash

Mrs. Brainard, 23, said she went into labor shortly before 9 a.m. at her home. Her husband -- a 24-year-old leather craftsman -- and a neighbor, John Maser, 21, helped her into the car and took off for San Francisco.

Then it happened. The wailing of a baby started at 9:25 a.m. in the middle of the bridge.

Brainard said he and his wife were in the back seat and Maser at the wheel.

Maser gunned the accelerator and at the toll plaza yelled something that resembled "Help!"

Toll

Bridge Lieutenant Alfred Rustice said he found Mrs. Brainard sitting up in the back seat with the baby in her arms.

"I asked her: 'How are you?'" Rustice said. "She replied: 'I'm fine.' So I told them the best thing to do was keep on going to UC Hospital."

In the confusion, Brainard said he forgot to pay the toll.

But Bridge Captain Edward Moore said Brainard came back later and offered to pay it. "I told him it was on us," Moore said. "I'm going to give that baby one of the bridge's original rivets when she comes back across."

Brainard said he and his wife, who have a three-year-old boy, Patrick, were considering naming the girl Golden.

From The Osage News of Sept.14th, 1893: "The doctor (Dudley Snow Brainard) was one of the older practitioners of the country, although he was comparatively a young man. He lived at St. Cloud, Wis., three years and then came to Stacyville in 1879. There he resided fourteen years, and they were years of unremitting toil. He never spared himself and worked harder than his strength justified. Last spring he moved to Osage. He did not seek a wider field of labor; he wanted to give his family better opportunities and hoped in a short time to lighten his own burdens. He never saw a well day after coming to this place. Much of the time he was a great sufferer. He fully realized that his chances of getting well were few, and he thoughtfully arranged his business affairs. He was willing to die or to get well as the Lord willed. The summons came and he was ready. Dr. Brainerd was a man of wonderful energy and push. He put his whole soul into whatever he undertook. He labored up to the full measure of his strength and beyond it. He was a conscientious and successful physician. He was always willing to respond to a call even when one might be justified in refusing to go there. He often exposed himself to the severities of the winter, and undermined his constitution. He was kind, considerate, and courteous in his treatment of others. He made friends in an unusual degree, and was ready to do anything to add to their comfort. He was an earnest Christian man, and believed in the work of the church. He hoped after coming to this place to be more active than he had ever been. His religion was a comfort to him in the closing hours of his life. Christ was his personal Saviour."

Published in The Journal of the American Medical Association, Sept. 30th, 1893: "He received his medical education at the University of Buffalo, N.Y., graduating Feb. 23, 1875. After practicing a short time in Minn. and Wis., he removed in 1879 to Stacyville, Iowa, where he resided until a short time before his death. Dr. Brainerd prized his profession highly and was regarded as one of the strongest men in regular medicine in Northern Iowa. At the time of his death he was a member in good standing in the County, State, and American Medical Associations. He was a faithful attendant at the meetings of these societies, contributing frequently by papers, which were listened to with interest. His memory will long be held in loving esteem among those who knew him as a faithful physician, a loyal friend, a noble man, and a Christian."

Wherever he was he was the life of the party. He inherited from his mother a sunny, sympathetic, enthusiastic temperament, which was, however, regulated and controlled by the caution and common sense, which were very marked traits in his character, and which came to him from his father. He early gave his heart to Christ, uniting with the Presbyterian Church of Red Wing, Minn., when about fifteen years of age. Later during his school life and young manhood, he was a member of the Congregational Church, of Zumbrota, Minn. Later still, and at the time of his death, he belonged to the Congregational Church of Stacyville. He was not only a skillful physician and surgeon, but outside of his profession he had great executive and business ability and served his town and church in many ways. He was president of the school board, and a man to whom others intrusted their business with the utmost confidence. He was always intensely interested in all the great questions of the times and stood ever on the side of right and justice. Why the Lord saw fit to call such a man in the prime of life away from this world where he was so well fitted to do good, is something which can not be understood here. You ask in regard to the Doctor's father; he was living with his daughter, Mrs. G. C. Hill, in Rosendale, Wis.

258. FRANCIS OSBORN BRAYNARD (Edwin Crasto, Horatio Lane, 97. Thomas Lane[6] - Joshua[2]) m. 4 July 1949, Bellmore, Long Island, NY. to Doris Virginia Shelland. She was b. 14 Aug. 1922, Queens, New York, NY., dau. of Harry Shelland and Ella Clayton. Mr. Braynard has had a lifelong love for the sea and its ships. He grew up with a tiller in one hand and an artist's sketchbook in the other. His sailor father was his chief inspiration in pursuing a career in the maritime industry.

Since 1943, he has worked for the American Merchant Marine Institute as ship news reporter for the New York Herald Tribune, and for Moran Towing & Transportation Co. He was program director for the South Street Seaport Museum, New York (of which he was founder), and is currently curator of the American Merchant Marine Museum, Kings Point, New York.

Mr. Braynard created OP SAIL (Operation Sail) '76 and following that triumph, convinced the City of New York that it needed an annual Harbor Festival. The City agreed on condition that he head the organization -- a job he held from 1977 through 1980. He also enjoys the role of globe-trotting shipboard lecturer on cruise liners.

As a professional artist, he almost always depicts the great ocean-going ships, both steam and sail. A prolific writer, he has written and illustrated more than 20 books, along with countless magazine articles. One most ambitious project was his six-volume history of the famous U.S. Lines flagship, the Leviathan, which was the queen of the sea from 1911 through the 1920s.

Mr. Braynard is a past president of the Steamship Historical Society of America, and an honorary member of the Council of American Master Mariners and the Veteran Wireless Operators Association. He is also a Fellow of the Rochester Museum & Science Center and a Fellow of the Royal Society, London.

In 1986 he was awarded the Bowditch Maritime Scholar of the Year Award by the American Merchant Marine Museum. The Board of OP SAIL 1986 named a trophy the "Frank Braynard Trophy" and presented it aboard the EAGLE to that famed Coast Guard tall ship on her 50th birthday at the South Street Seaport Museum. In 1987 the Steamship Historical Society of America named him as one of the first two recipients of their Maritime Achievement Award.

His goal throughout his career has been to tell people, through word and illustration, of the importance of ships and shipping to us all. Mr. and Mrs. Braynard live in Sea Cliff, NY.

when he was five, and when he was older apparently ran away frequently to be with his real mother. Perhaps for this reason he was sent to the Plummer Farm School in Salem, Mass., a place for wayward boys. He wrote a letter from there on May 9, 1923, which is the last time he was known to have been alive. Supposedly he later hit a child with his truck, and still later moved away (place unknown) and married. His wife (name unknown) is said to have been pregnant when he died following a bizarre accident. He went to a costume party wearing a WWI German uniform complete with spiked helmet, and fell downstairs, landing on the spike. The accident did not kill him outright, but the cancer that did was said to be connected. His widow as much as nine years later asked his uncle Harry C. Brainerd and his wife to take in their son, who supposedly had some sort of blood disease. They refused, and the widow and child were not heard from again.

The following editorial from Today's Health, January 1971, and the article by Franklin Brainard from Today's Health, July 1971, were provided by other Brainard family members.

THE EDITORS' COLUMN

Frequently, letters reach these editorial offices that are out of the mainstream and deserve special attention. One such example is the work of Franklin Brainard, of New Brighton, Minnesota.

With his permission, we want to share portions of Mr. Brainard's recent letter. First, you should know these things about this unusual author:

He is 50, and for 24 of his years has been a high school teacher. Further, he is a published poet and a father of three children. His most ardent wish is to "live normally and raise a normal family." But for Franklin Brainard, there are extra tensions. He is suffering with chronic myelogenous leukemia.

Thanking us for our October article, "We're Starting to Use The Word Cure" (by Walter Ross), Mr. Brainard writes:

"The article triggers considerations for me and I would imagine for other leukemia patients . . . What the article did spell is hope, perhaps cautious for me but there, nonetheless."

In a controlled yet sensitive style, Mr. Brainard told of what he termed partially realized mortality. "There was a furtive look at a pathology text of the 1950's that told me the life span for people with my disease was from two to nine years . . ."

The date of Mr. Brainard's discovery was February 19, 1968. Now, today, he writes: "There is a necessity that all this count to someone. No one wishes meaningless life or death. Just as there are group therapy sessions for those who must deal with the turmoil of inner life, so there needs to be a sharing among leukemia patients . . . It is our lessons each needs to give to each."

Pursuing his thought, Mr. Brainard wrote a poem he titled White Ropes. In part, it reads:

Yesterday's December rain turned snow this morning.
The wind brought white ropes to hold us and the cattle and horses turned in their ancient ritual
to head downwind.
I could have read this
if I wished
as the freezing of life
but this isn't so.
The ranch dog, sheep-white with snow,
will not come in;
his life is outside.
There is an endurance,
with hope...
I turn in,
thinking of the white storm
in my blood:
leukemia;
turn in
remember horses,
remember cattle,
remember dog,

remember badland cedars
knotting up to sun
in land so dry
no tree should grow.
I turn out again
and you may have the harvest
of my marrow.

Mr. Brainard works a full day teaching, and believes he is a better teacher because of his awareness. "There has been a straying from timid organizational procedures," he writes, "and a true attempt to probe what means to my students and what means to me."

Plainly, Mr. Brainard is not the average letter-writer. Our dialogue with him has begun, and our wish is that it continue for as long as he commands.

At age 50, Franklin Brainard appears to be in his prime. He is enthusiastic in all that he does, successful at the two things he does best--teaching and poetry. He is 1971 finalist for Minnesota Teacher of the Year. He is newly appointed to read poetry to high school students.

But now a dark and certain knowledge shadows his work, prompting such vivid lines as "the white storm in my blood."

Franklin Brainard knows there is no weathering the ravages of his inner turbulence. The "white storm" he blinded into, in his prime, is leukemia. Medical odds give him less than a year to live.

Already, Franklin Brainard has lived three borrowed years. Battling terrible odds, he has pushed away self-pity, striving to give life to others--and to share in their vitality.

He knows the end could come suddenly, with rapid deterioration. "The disease could turn to the acute blastic stage," says his doctor, blood specialist Nejat Turkbas, M.D., "with everything going down . . . ending with infection or hemorrhage."

Instead of dwelling on how much time is left, Franklin Brainard is reaching out to youngsters with his poetry. He also is helping himself, because his crisp, compelling stanzas are a necessary way of letting out the stifled scream.

That's why we didn't hesitate to ask him to share his strength with others. And that's why he agreed to write about "the loneliness of disease." The result is this sensitive personal narrative.

February 13, 1968. No real sleep that night. I was uncomfortable without knowing what was wrong.

February 14, 1968. Told my high school principal I wouldn't make it in. "There's nothing that I know of wrong with me, but I feel bad and haven't slept." He understood. I was completely worn out and my bones hurt.

I got out of bed only to watch Beth go to school. (She was 11 then.) As a poet I think in images, relating them to human experience. Watching Beth, I thought of a few lines for a poem. With a later, lonely knowledge, four lines have more than usual significance.

Before me, men and women.
After me, men and women.
In the sun my youngest leaves for school, vigor in each snow-crisp footfall.

February 16, 1968. Back to school, but now with an eye infection. I get medication from the clinic and return to bed for the weekend.

February 18, 1968. Felt good during the day and looked for an early return to school. But by 9:30 p.m. I was in terrible pain. My bones felt as if they were bottles with too much carbonation. Intense pain had me in tears. My wife, Muriel, obviously troubled, called the doctor and got me some codeine-Empirin.

February 19, 1968. Blood tests at the clinic. The doctor wouldn't talk to Muriel about the problem by phone. He said it was serious, but not immediate. He spoke of an abnormally high white count. I knew. When Muriel and I were high school freshmen, a senior class president died within six weeks.

February 23, 1968. Went with Beth, Mark (then 19), and Muriel to the clinic. The children knew the surface of the iceberg. Muriel knew my guess and we felt the cold, lurking underbody.

My doctor is Turkish, a gentle man of quiet beauty. He started, as doctors do, to tell me by steps. I stopped him. Fear made me ask, "Have I got leukemia?"

After a surprised "Yes," he continued his explanation. I was a victim of chronic myelogenous leukemia.

Waiting for lab results, I could not be brave. My wife knew. Seated quietly with my family in the waiting room, a few of the many inside tears came out. That night a fellow poet, Ray Smith, stayed over. He tried to touch my fear. We had a few drinks and, incredibly, Ray made me laugh--though what I laughed at in shock is gone now.

After the sad laughter, I paused to look back. Before Christmas I had said to my wife, "I am so tired I don't know whether I can go on." My tiredness had a reason.

Six months before, I had written lines in separate poems supposedly about other people: "until the marrow makes no more blood" and "In his high white count I found my cancer." Was this another form of what psychologists call projection? Does the body know?

During the first week at home with the disease, I lost 12 pounds. My liver was swollen. My spleen was notched. My mirror face was gray.

Each day, the lonely knowledge took deeper hold.

Mornings, after my family left, I lay quietly, too languid to read, hoping my disease could be controlled. At first I took three busulfan tablets a day to suppress bone marrow activity. I took two allopurinol tablets a day to seep down the uric acid in my blood. My life became wrapped around daily medication, with dosages that varied as my frequent blood tests varied.

I would live. But on a dangerous drug that suppressed not only the cancerous white cells, but also the red cells, platelets, and healthy white cells, too. It was a powerful drug from which I must have occasional recess to rest my bone marrow.

There followed five weeks at home getting down the white blood count and, as my hippie friends say, getting my head together. The latter was (and remains) a tough, lonely project.

There are hammering repetitions--Tchaikovsky's pain repeated in a Bach fugue. My family gone each day. Panic in an empty house. Questions at a window. Questions under the pallor of a winter sun. Is this all there is? Will there be no chance to speak my images? How long will I live? How long? Some focus comes as I look out of my window at our collie.

My collie lies, a half-shaped question mark.
on the back steps. All her senses ask the air
and answers move like squirrels in heat-shimmer.
I wonder, see blown fur through bent glass.

Could my doctor be wrong? I asked for another opinion. He sent me to another doctor for a bone marrow test.

His findings were confirmed.

There was a furtive look at an old pathology text that told me the life span for people with my disease was---as I misread it--from two to nine years. In fact, the text said "usual duration is two to four years, but authentic cases of nine or 10 years' duration are on record."

Apparently, my fear would not let me accept only four years, and my hope was so disciplined that it could not stretch to double figures.

In the absence of institutionalized faith, I searched out, those harassed night-waking hours, such anchors as I had. There were quiet "Our Fathers" as I pushed myself through daily necessities because, while I was turned off on institutions, I was not turned off on prayer.

There were the awkward and loving sympathies of friends. Somehow, I dealt with them. Lloyd Kreitz, a sensitive fellow teacher gave me Dylan Thomas's Collected Poems and there it was, "Do Not Go Gentle Into That Good Night"--the uncreated lightning words, the frail deeds. Was there also the hope that "Blind eyes could blaze like meteors and be gay?" I must not quit.

Students in one class sent me Roethke: Collected Poems. Every signature is precious. I must not quit.

There was the jolt of my family. My wife and son do their worrying in the silence of their heads. But it showed. My 26-year old daughter came to me during that first week at home. Judy cried, saying "I'll show you, Dad. You'll see. I'll be someone." Some strange monster from our puritan past would not let her see. She speaks Russian and French fluently, plays oboe, piano, guitar. My ear could not compare to hers. She is someone.

Our youngest, Beth, had not been told. There was the moment at the breakfast table when that bright child turned to me while we were discussing something else and said, "Have you got leukemia?"

In that moment I had to decide whether to lie or tell the truth, and well-meaning counselors had said I shouldn't tell . . .

I told her the truth, which she had guessed from my frequent blood tests and her hygiene test. It was out and I was glad.

Gradually, I built faith in my doctor, so that when he moved to another clinic I followed. I read everything I could about leukemia, and realized that I was responding to the drugs of his choice. He has answered every question. Even the hardest: What will happen eventually?

He told me that in most cases like mine, the disease at some point would become acute and would be much harder to treat. No, he could not hold death forever in a tree, but he would do what he could. I know that he is probably as good and as fallible in his field as I am in mine. I know that he cares about me as a human being. Each time we meet I rise and shake his hand.

There were returns of depression. Then there was the mind saying, "You must not think the world ends with you. It goes on with your children. It goes on."

Gone, though, was the immodest hope, my Walter Mitty fantasy, that I would live a long life and write strong poetry in my old age as Thomas Hardy did. There were the offers to my doctor that if and when my case turned acute I would be glad to have him try experimental drugs. There were blood tests every one to four weeks and the beautiful nurses and technologists who became part of my family of the soul.

And there was my work, teaching. I quit asking students questions to which I thought I knew the answers. I started asking them those to which I did not. They rose like hungry trout. I will work and write as long as I can.

Is my head together? Is anyone's head ever together? Yes, but only gradually, only with constant effort. The word one cannot hold forever grows sharp. Each old house, each abandoned silo speaks.

The old house dances a slow twist its studs
turn swayed and dry.
Do square nails ache?
Vandalized by time
old putty leaves its glass;
sills wither.
What is the feel of falling panes?

All goes elemental.
Nearby a topless silo
whistles in the wind.
Did someone call?

As surely as my parents are elements and buried in Hunt's Hollow Cemetery in New York, I will be elements. Perhaps, as Western religions say, there will be a life of the spirit. Perhaps, as Hindus believe, there may be continuing lives, capped by Nirvana. As Erik Erikson says in Gandhi's Truth, no man in his right mind believes he will not continue.

I can talk about my death calmly in the afternoon
but it is in the night when I wake,
lone,
that horror holds my skull bone-close and I swear, given the chance, to go on eating frozen ice
with hot teeth,
to go on singing from a garlic breath.

I have not conquered lonely, sleepless nights. I do not know that I will, but I know that the act of sharing is cardinal. I know the best of sharing comes in created things. Robert Frost's grim seeing of what must be seen, the falcon language of Yeats' poems.

When I was on a merchant ship in India, I saw a human body floating down a branch of the Ganges. There was a crow riding on it, picking out a meal. The image is with me. Nothing but derangement or senility will displace it as long as I live. It is one ancient burial.

Death is a fact of life. While it always seems, as it did to Hamlet, "so particular" with me, it is there. At 20. At 50. At 90. So the question isn't really death but dealing with the when of it.

What can one finally say? If human experience has any validity, it must be made to serve others.

Must one be a Keats to share? Most of us will never come close. The most immediate act of sharing is to face others and to listen, hearing better for our own lonely knowledge. The next most immediate act is writing--diaries and letters--whatever prose and poetry we are made of. These need not be masterpieces of language. Most of my friends fracture the English language, but they do beautifully with street American.

What I've said sounds archaic. I do not care. I do not prize today's value systems. The young I know do not either, and, while I disagree with them frequently, I have more faith in them than I do in my own generation. Perhaps with some real sharing, some real touching, the world might be a little cleaner, a little more peaceful, a little kinder.

When I talk with students, particularly elementary students, about the images of their experience, when I read them poems carrying these images, when the quick lives of their faces move, when their hands go up and we rap, the sad laughter of an earlier, lonely night is gone. There is a happy laughter and we live together.

And I carry this living with me. I have lived for three years with chronic myelogenous leukemia. Perhaps the longer I live, the greater the chance to go on living. It is a fire-sharpened living and I want to build fire shoes.

FIRE SHOES

In the bird-waking time
from the knowing of coals
I have sewn fire shoes.
I have marched the morning hours
like Hamlet's father
my ear alert to poison
but also to the songs of fire to the damned singing
clinkers out of being.
I have sewn fire shoes
for those who could not stitch the leather
I have sewn
with living flesh
to say to living flesh
you, too, have bare feet

you, too, must walk
and I give you fire shoes
that tenderfoot
over live coals
you may still hear:
for there are birds
and they are singing.

A CONVERSATION

Two young Minnesota poets, Mike Kincaid and James Naiden, had a conversation with Franklin Brainard at his house in New Brighton, on December 5th 1971. Some excerpts from the conversation follow. The whole interview may be read in The North Stone Review, No. 3.

Naiden: You said you've written poems for how long?

Brainard: Well, seriously I've probably written since I was nineteen years of age.

Naiden: That's over thirty years-

Brainard: Yeah.

Naiden: And it took you how long to get published?

Brainard: Twenty-five.

Naiden: Twenty-five years--what does that mean to you, that long?

Brainard: Well, it means that I wasn't sending out enough and it means that I wasn't good enough--and, you know, a poem has to stand the letter test: your voice and your personality and everything that you are is not there in the editor's office. And what he has is a piece of paper--but he may have a hangover and his wife may have given him a bad time and he may be reading the poem at eight o'clock in the morning. I mean, you have to speak to his sensibilities at this time and-

Kincaid: Editors are like that.

Brainard: Well, we're all like that. I don't object to the fact that it took twenty-five years, but at this stage of the game I'd like to get a hearing--there is that thing.

Naiden: So it's been the past six or seven years since you've been publishing poetry?

Brainard: The very first things were published in 1965--and I figured that I had been writing for twenty-five years seriously, preceding that, I mean. I wrote while I was on merchant ships--I was always writing. But I wasn't getting close to experience, somehow or another. If you'd look at some of the first things that I published, like "That Bag Of Winds" in the Chicago Jewish Forum, you'd see complicated, involuted, compacted lines.

Now, I've gotten to the stage where I can say things--fairly complicated things--in fairly simple language--which of course is what I've been aiming for. But I didn't know what I was aiming for at the time, but now I realize that this is the thing that I should have been aiming for.

Naiden: You mentioned Ray Smith. . .

Brainard: Oh, Ray Smith is a marvelous poet, and I mentioned Ray--first, I suppose,--because he was the first poet I met. I met him in the spring of '65. Matter of fact, I think probably Ray and Mike Kincaid met just shortly after Ray and I met. But I had to be forty-five years old, and I had to have written in an almost kind of sensibility vacuum for years before I met anybody with whom I could communicate; and here was a fine, sensitive man who was so quiet that you had to draw his poems from him. But he would take yours and take them and look at them with love and with kindness and would help--it was a new experience for me.

Naiden: You live in New Brighton now, in 1971, but could you tell us something about your earlier life? What brought you to this point in your creative work, as well as in your own life?

Brainard: Well, I think--I think I was hooked on the American Dream for a while, and while, at some level while Muriel and I and the children were living in a log house in the Black Hills--we lived there in the timber for eight years--at some level I knew that this was one of the great periods of my life, just as a living experience, I couldn't quite make a living at one job, always had to work at something else.

Naiden: When did you come here?

Brainard: Well, we came down here in 1956 from Deadwood, South Dakota.

Naiden: And you had lived there previously-

Brainard: We'd lived there for nine years, one in an apartment and eight in the timber--yeah, it was marvelous-

Naiden: But, prior to 1956, you lived in the Dakotas all your life?

Brainard: Yeah, well it was before, living in South Dakota in the Black Hills, I'd lived in North Dakota. . .One of my poems about the Heart River was published in the Hornbook Magazine. . .The Heart River is a river near Dickinson. . .

Naiden: You've been in Minnesota for how long?

Brainard: Fifteen years.

Naiden: Fifteen years. And I suppose you've seen a lot of Minnesota poets, you've met some of them. What aspect of this area--the Upper Midwest--is most important for a poet's experience and life?

Brainard: I suppose I could mention John Caddy's close observation of reptilian life. He had a magnificent poem about a frog and its eyes, and he has a wonderful poem about the asininity of modern civilization and the Indian in that modern civilization, and the Leroys out shooting on Sundays with their rifles. And there's a wonderful poem by the black poet, Roy McBride, which grows out of his observation of the American scene from the Middle West--and that's "Levi Strauss, You Have Left Your Mark on The Ass of America." You see, many of the things that these poets have here is a physical observation of the earth and its spirit for them and its philosophy for them and so on. And you can't shut this out, even in the middle of town--like some of Mike Kincaid's things deal with the birds on the branches on the trees outside his window--and its not the old Victorian birds-and-bees thing, in any sense, it's always part of this human probe of who are we and where are we and where have we come from and what heaven is ours, if at all?

Kincaid: Now there's a feeling I get from your poetry--the agate reminded me of it--the very fine sense of contour and process and texture that goes on in your best poems. It relates to the crystalline structure of a rock or the taste of metal or how a branch grows or something like that--it's very primary.

Brainard: Well, you know, it's a funny thing. I think a lot of that stuff grew out of my dad. He was a country lawyer--and he used to say that his business depended upon the farmer, and if the farmer wouldn't make it, he wouldn't make it. And always he was taking me around, all through North Dakota. I can remember rattling around in his Model T Ford, and we used to go across the Missouri River at points where there were ferries and not bridges, and he was always showing me things. Like--he didn't give me any lectures on it. I mean, he'd make sure that there were things that I could see--and, oh, in a similar vein, when I was nine years old, in 1929, he took me through East St. Louis so that I could have a look at a ghetto. He never gave me a lecture, never said a word, but he just took me, driving slowly. And he was a poet himself. He didn't ever write a poem that I know of--but we'd go by a graveyard and he'd say to me: "The cities of the dead are larger than the cities of the living." And this is the way he spoke.

Naiden: I suppose he's deceased now?

Brainard: Yes, he died in '41.

Naiden: I know my own father's influence--he's still living--but my relationship with him has been an influence in a lot of my creative work. I suppose your father's was to you.

Brainard: Oh, yes, my father--and my mother, too. My mother was one of those delightful products of the post-Freudian, post-Darwinian world, and she was very scientific on the surface. But she'd go round the kitchen and she'd be baking her bread and she'd recite: "So live that when thy summons come to join that innumerable caravan..." or "Whither midst falling dew..." or something of this nature. So both of them were contributing language--and my dad was a keen observer. We were going by a farm one time and he said, "You see that water tank over there, son? Describe to me what you see." And what happened was that you had these metal bands around these wooden water tanks, and when they dried out, the parts separated. And they had fallen down inward toward the center of the circle. I said to him: "It fell apart." Now he said: "The German farmer, looking at that, would say: "It fell together." And that's much more accurate. . .

Naiden: How old are you now? Fifty-two?

Brainard: I'll be fifty-two in June.

SONG FOR A WIDOW'S MARRIAGE

Husband, I come to you, no girl,
but a woman earthed from North Dakota.
I have known the farm,
have milked cows,
have forked manure
into the spreader,
have smelt the deep ammonia
of horse urine.
I have borne the womb burden;
I have born and bear
the woes of children,
woes that hang as unaccountable
as moon dogs or a dry dipper.
I come to you no girl

but I come rich
with peasant blood
and warm as sun-dug potatoes.
You shall have me warm beside you when winter turns over the roof's edge;
you shall have me
like something held for winter
coming live with flavor
from the double-doored root cellar;
and, when I take the pies
from the oven
and when I take the bread that yeasted all the kitchen
in the afternoon,
come, kiss my neck
and walk with me
through the late garden.
